

AccountMate Software Corporation Current Product Line Strategy

AccountMate Software Corporation plans to continue development and enhancements to its four accounting software product lines in the foreseeable future.

Currently, AccountMate has four source code modifiable product lines: AccountMate Enterprise, AccountMate for SQL, AccountMate for Express, and AccountMate for LAN. These last three product lines are all based on Microsoft Visual FoxPro programming language. AccountMate Software has used this programming language since it was first introduced in 1995 and expects that its software products will be viable solutions long after Microsoft officially stops supporting Visual FoxPro in 2015. That is one of the advantages of working with AccountMate's source code software. There really is no hard end date for the accounting software and this stable development tool.

Ken Levy, President of MashupX, LLC and former Visual FoxPro Product Manager at Microsoft, says, "I've been following the implementation of AccountMate in-depth for over 10 years. I have complete confidence that AccountMate makes the most of the very stable Visual FoxPro development tool in the integration of their SQL and LAN products. And I have no doubt that the AccountMate applications could continue to be viable into the next decade as they are upgraded with FoxPro. "

AccountMate's most current shipping product line is AccountMate Enterprise, and Accountmate Enterprise Express and is built on Microsoft .NET. There has been an initial version release, and development efforts will continue until all modules are available. Like the other current AccountMate product lines, AccountMate Enterprise is being built to ensure its longevity and use by our clients. AccountMate Enterprise rounds out our product offerings to four running in parallel.

AccountMate's future direction is to continue to release product enhancements and provide support for AccountMate for AccountMate Enterprise, AccountMate Enterprise Express, AccountMate for SQL, AccountMate for Express, and AccountMate for LAN. Our strategy is to continue to enhance these products as they are built on sound Visual FoxPro and .NET tools.

AccountMate Solution Providers are extremely capable of handling implementation, customization and support of our three current product lines and should be equally prepared to support the AccountMate Enterprise product line in the future.
